

Document title: GUIDELINES FOR CODING

- Naming conventions should be followed.
- Proper indentation at appropriate locations should be followed.
- Comments should be relevant, adequate and self-explanatory.
- Information about the author and the module should be adequately described at the beginning of the programme.
- All variables used in the programme should be explicitly declared before using the variables
- Linking of function definitions and functional declarations should be properly done.